The Second Session was taken by Dr. Sujatha P. Shanbhog, advisor, NAAC, Bangalore. Madam has been introduced to the audience by Dr. Naveenchandra C.B, Asst. Professor, Vaikunta Baliga College of Law, Udupi. She dealt with the topic on "The Revised Guidelines for the Preparations and Online Submission of IQAR and SSR". Madam started the session by saying that the institutions in India have begun with self-external valuation and quality assessment so that the Institution can get to know where they stand and they can identify the internal resources and plan their strategies so that they can improve themselves. It helps to know the strength, weakness, opportunities and challenges. The Institutions can build their own ways to create a benchmark and improve their status. The Institutions can have long term or short-term plans to build the collegiality of the Institutions. The advantage of NAAC grading will help the intra or inter college collaborations, assessment and accreditation status will help the stakeholders or students to select the best institution with the help of grading methods. She stated that NAAC has 5 core values such as

1. Contribute to National development
2. Global competency among students.
3. Inculcating value system.
4. Promoting the use of technology
5. All these 4 will lead to excellence.

Madam also referred about the 7 criteria of NAAC, which are dimensions encompassing academic, administrative and management activities of HEIs. These are dealt with key indicators having specific functional aspects with each key area. She also said that these are again divided into 2 they are. Qualitative metric- by the Assessor Quantitative matrices- these are DVV partners that are the third party, they are appointed for verification, validation for the data of each institution- composed of 70%. She also highlighted that NAAC gives Institutional Accreditation and not programmed Accreditation. So the Institution must include all the programmes and the required documents should be submitted. She dealt with the data which is required for IIQA. After the IIQA accepted- SSR can be submitted within 45 days. She also summarized about Self Study report and SSR Submission readiness and their formalities. She further explained that the finalization of value comes when certain points are fulfilled. There are some important points to be kept in mind by the institution they are. File size must be 5MB.
